Steel Plants Poise for Production Race

STRIKES ENDING; RECORD OUTPUT TO BE SOUGHT

U. S. Steel Corp. Breaks Wage-Price Deadlock; Others To Follow

BACK TO JOBS! IS CRY

1,200 Smaller Firms Ready To Sign Truce With CIO Union Heads

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 16 — The nation's steel industry was poised today for one of the greatest production races in history.

With "bellwether" U. S. Steel Corp. breaking the wage-price deadlock which has kept more than 1,200 steel plants strikebound for 27 days, the drive for record output was on. Other big basic producers already have scheduled meetings with CIO United Steel workers' representatives to sign new agreements.

The government-sponsored settlement of the dispute will bring the average wage to the $50.00 a week, the drive for record output was on. Other big basic producers already have scheduled meetings with CIO United Steel workers' representatives to sign new agreements.

New Bread On Sale In 6 or 8 Weeks

Output Of Truman Flour For 'Off-White' Product Starts March 1

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—The Agriculture Department told housewives today that they could expect the new "off-white" bread to start showing up in their stores in from six to eight weeks.

The department said millers had been ordered to start making "Truman Flour" on March 1. It will be from four to six weeks after that before present stocks of light flour are exhausted and bakers turn to the new flour.

Under the new order, millers must produce flour which contains by weight at least 80 per cent of the original wheat from which it is made. The present percentage is about 72.

Bakers, however, will not have to put as much enrichment in their bread to bring it up to federal standards because the new flour is higher in vitamin content than ordinary flour.

The order was issued to divert grain from livestock feeding purposes to human consumption so this country can meet its grain commitments to hungry peoples overseas.

Mystery Veils Murder Of California Politician

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 16—The nude body of William H. Bonsall, 45, onetime Republican candidate for state assemblyman, was found sprawled in the driveway of his luxurious home early today. He had been beaten to death.

A six-foot pipe, smeared with blood, was found about 10 feet from the body. Bonsall's face and head were bludgeoned almost beyond recognition.

Police reported a trail of blood and overturned furniture in the 10-room home, indicating that the political leader had put up a fierce battle for his life.

The fatal fight apparently started in a small sitting room, where Bonsall's clothes were found draped over a chair, apparently preparatory to retiring for the night. A blood-stained bathrobe lay on a fur rug.

The radio was going full blast and a fire was smoldering in the fireplace. Two small tables had been broken.

The trail of blood led to the dining room and then to the kitchen, where bloodstains were found on a water heater. There were other signs of a struggle in the study, and bloodstains on the window sill.

NAVY TO TEST ATOM BOMB ON SHIPS MAY 15

Aviation Authority Predicts Trials Will Prove Of Little Value

NOTED SCIENTIST AGREES

Few Craft Will Be Damaged By Aerial Attack, Say Seversky, Morris

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16 — The Navy set the date for its first atomic bomb test on ships for May 15 today in the face of predictions that such tests will prove little if anything.

The date of the second test to be held in July at Bikini atoll in the Pacific will not be decided until the first test has been completed. A third underwater test is to be held in 1947.

The prediction that the tests would be of little value was made before the senate naval affairs committee by Maj. Alexander P. Seversky, noted aviation authority and author, and Dr. Philip Morris, Los Alamos atom scientist.

Seversky, who takes the attitude that the atomic bomb is merely an oversized explosive rather than revolutionary new weapon, was even more skeptical.

He said that after what he saw at Hiroshima, "I wouldn't mind being below deck" of the ship nearest the bomb.

That was about the only point on which Seversky and the atom scientists agreed. Morrison challenged his statement that an atomic bomb would do no more damage in a modern city of steel and concrete than a 10-ton block-buster.

He estimated that it would take from 100 to 300 blockbusters to wreck a city as completely as were Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Meanwhile, Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, who is in charge of the Army and Navy pilotless "drone" planes will be tested in the blast.

Slavs Fear Intentions Of Poles

Russia Asks UNO Chief To Consider Expatriate Army In Italy

LONDON, Feb. 16—Russia today called the UNO security council's attention to what was termed another possible threat to peace—presence of the Polish army in Italy.

Shortly before the council met for what some delegations believe was the last time, Andrei Y. Vishinsky handed to Secretary General Trygve Lie a letter calling the council's attention to Yugoslavia's fears about the intentions of the Poles in Italy.

Vishinsky's letter did not specifically request that the Polish army be placed on the council's agenda. The only question on the agenda was disposition of the Syrian-Lebanese request for withdrawal of French and British troops.

Vishinsky's letter was accompanied by a memorandum from the Yugoslav government condemning the Polish army in Italy under the command of Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, formerly acting commander in chief of the defunct London Polish government.

The Yugoslav statement said there are 120,000 Polish troops in Italy, hostile to the Yugoslav republics and deployed along Yugoslav frontiers. It asserted that the Poles are in contact with "Yugoslav quislings" hiding in Italy, especially "croat terrorists."

The Polish army is trying to enlist Yugoslavs in Italy under the slogan "fight against communism in Yugoslavia."

The security council had before it a formal motion by The Netherlands proposing that the council acknowledge statements made on the situation in the Levant and express confidence that as a result of negotiations the British and French troops will be withdrawn from Syria and Lebanon soon, and call for all parties to keep the council informed so it may take future action if necessary.

PAULEY'S PALS INSPECT RECORD

Truman Stands Pat For Nominee, Despite Criticism

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16 — A note of mystery bobbed up today in the senate naval affairs committee's investigation of Edwin W. Pauley's qualifications to be Navy undersecretary.

It was learned today that Pauley's friends have borrowed—and returned—the memoranda which retiring secretary of interior Harold L. Ickes submitted as evidence against Pauley. They explained they wanted to photostat it.

The senators were uncertain why Pauley supporters would want the photostats unless they hoped to prove that the memoranda were written recently and therefore may have contained inaccuracies due to the lapse of time.

Ickes did not make it clear when the memoranda were prepared. He did say he wrote the notes from which they were prepared following (Continued on Page Two)

TRUMAN TO RUN IN '48? HE JUST HASN'T DECIDED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—President Truman has not made up his mind about running for reelection in 1948.

He told his news conference yesterday he'd been too busy to give it a thought. He, as he put it bluntly, was trying to get through 1946. He'd think about 1948 when it arrived.

But he denied that he had said he would not run in 1948. Stories to that effect were untrue, he said.

Schultz Testifies That Part Of Jap Note Was Decoded Dec. 6

F. D. R. READ INTERCEPTS

Pearl Harbor Investigators Await Testimony Of Admiral Beardsall

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16 — The testimony that the late President Roosevelt expected war on the basis of Japan's final diplomatic note aroused new questions in the Pearl Harbor committee today about White House developments prior to the attack on the Pacific naval base.

The president's reaction to the first 13 parts of the diplomatic note were described late yesterday by Cmdr. Lester R. Schultz, Mr. Roosevelt's assistant naval aide at the time.

Beardsall Awaited Sen. Homer Ferguson, R. Mich., said Schultz' testimony makes it imperative that the committee hear Rear Adm. J. B. Beardsall, the naval aide, Ferguson said.

Beardsall should tell when Mr. Roosevelt received the final 14th part of the Japanese message and what steps were taken to avert the war in those final hours.

The first 13 parts of the Japanese note were intercepted and decoded by the Navy during the afternoon and evening of Dec. 6, 1941.

Schultz said he delivered a locked pouch containing the highly secret Japanese intercepts to the study that night. Mr. Roosevelt and his confidential adviser, the late Harry L. Hopkins, were alone in the study when the officer was ushered in.

Schultz didn't know what was in the pouch but he unlocked it and handed the contents — about 15 pages of typewritten matter — to the President. Capt. A. D. Kramer of Navy intelligence has testified the pouch contained the first 13 parts of the final diplomatic note.

Hopkins Read Papers "The President read for 10 or 15 minutes and then handed the papers to Mr. Hopkins," Schultz testified. Mr. Hopkins read them and handed them back to the President.

"The President turned to Mr. Hopkins and said, in substance, 'this means war.'"

Schultz said Hopkins agreed with the President and lamented the fact that the United States couldn't strike the first blow to wrest the initiative from Japan. He said Mr. Roosevelt nodded agreement but declared that course was not open to a peaceful democracy.

Schultz said he heard nothing to indicate there might be an attack on Pearl Harbor or that war would come the next day.

NAVAL OFFICER CLEARED IN U. S. CONSPIRACY PLOT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—The justice department has dismissed an indictment against former Navy Lt. Andrew Roth, 26, one of three persons charged with conspiring to remove highly secret government files.

The government said the charges were dropped because of insufficient evidence. Roth, who was serving as an intelligence officer in the Navy department when the charges were brought, now is doing free-lance writing in New York City.

Six persons originally were arrested on the charges by the FBI but a grand jury refused to indict three of them.

The others indicted were Emmanuel Sigurd Larsen, 47, former specialist in the China division of the state department, and Philip Jacob Jaffe, 48, New York City editor and publisher of the magazine Amerasia.

Senate Defeats Truman On White House Wing

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—The senate has killed President Truman's last hope of getting his proposed addition to the White House.

The senate yesterday backed up the appropriations committee in cutting an $870,000 allowance for the work from the $5,000,000,000 independent offices appropriation bill.

The President claimed the new wing was necessary to take care of the enlarged White House staff. He said it would not even be noticeable to the casual passer-by.

Historical and architectural groups protested, however. They said the White House should remain exactly what it was meant to be—the president's home and not an office building.

Meanwhile, the entire appropriations measure was bogged down because of a disagreement over whether this country should continue to monitor foreign propaganda broadcasts.

Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar, D. Tenn., said this was useless "eavesdropping." Sen. Robert M. La Follette, Prog., Wis., replied that it was imperative that congress and the White House be kept informed on foreign propaganda trends.

Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar, D. Tenn., asked the senate to cut $300,000 from the FCC appropriation of $5,560,000 (M) approved by the house.

When La Follette defended the monitoring service and pointed out that the FCC must dispose of a vast backlog of radio problems postponed during the war, the senate agreed to delay final action on the bill until Monday.

FRANK WARD, 74, ANTIQUE EXPERT, BELIEVED DEAD

Farm Home And Contents Including Many Valued Articles Destroyed

BODY NOT DISCOVERED

Flames Are Out Of Control When Two Passersby Discover Them

By Pat Taylor

Frank Ward, 74, bachelor recluse and accumulator of antiques, was missing and believed burned to death after fire destroyed his seven-room brick farm home on the west edge of Tarlton Saturday morning.

The flames were discovered blazing furiously at 8:30 a. m. by John Weaver and Harold Shaffer, of Tarlton, who were on their way to Circleville. The two entered the elderly man's bedroom but could find no trace of Mr. Ward.

The fire was completely out of control when Circleville firemen arrived. They could do nothing, except keep it from spreading to out-buildings.

Antiques Destroyed The fire destroyed the large number of antiques of all descriptions, the collection of which was Mr. Ward's hobby.

Every room in his house was piled high with old furniture, lumber, clocks, magazines, and newspapers. Mr. Ward was reputed never to throw anything away.

He never sold any items, but did a lot of trading. Many valuable antiques, stamps and coins were destroyed in the fire.

The fire continued to burn through the afternoon. Hundreds of people gathered. Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputies Lester Wolford and Vern Pontius posted "no-trespass" signs around the property.

Mr. Ward lived at the place the greater part of his life. He had been alone since his brother died a few years ago.

Various desks in the home were catcombed with secret drawers in which were kept items esteemed of especial value. Every room in the building and the out buildings were piled high with the life-time accumulation.

Firemen Handicapped Firemen's efforts were handicapped greatly by lack of water.

The bed from Mr. Ward's bedroom was the only thing salvaged from the blazing home.

Search for the body was handicapped because of the danger from falling walls to anyone entering the house.

Only known survivors of Mr. Ward are two cousins, Mary and Alice Taylor, of Pennsylvania avenue, Columbus.

Mr. Ward was renowned in the Tarlton community for being implicitly honest.

Dr. George W. Heffner was called to serve as coroner due to the illness of Dr. Lloyd Jones. He declared Mr. Ward dead.

3,000,000 JAP SOLDIERS STILL LEFT IN CHINA

CHUNGKING, Feb. 16—Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, American commander in China, said today that 390,000 Japanese soldiers have been sent home from China, and that 300,000 remains. He said that 35,000 Japanese were going home each week. Wedemeyer said his figures did not include Manchuria. He said he had no knowledge of the situation in Manchuria, which the Russians occupy.

made any move to warn Pacific outposts that night. Schultz said the President tried to reach Adm. Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, but found he was attending a Washington theater.

Excitement Feared
He said the President decided against having Stark paged because it might create public excitement. Schultz left the presidential study under the impression that Mr. Roosevelt planned to contact Stark at home later.

Ferguson said he wanted Stark recalled to see whether Schultz testimony refreshes his memory about the night before the attack. Stark and Gen. George C. Marshall, former Army chief of staff, both told the committee they couldn't recall where they were that night.

Ferguson said it may be necessary to schedule a special meeting late this month to hear Beardall. The former naval aide is on a special mission to Peru from which he is due to return Feb. 25.

Otherwise, the committee plans to complete the current phase of public hearings next Wednesday.

In order to meet that deadline the committee launched a speedup schedule yesterday during which it heard two other witnesses—Col. Otis K. Sadler of Army Intelligence in Washington and Capt. Joseph J. Rochefort, former naval intelligence officer at Hawaii.

Drum Informed
Sadler revealed that in 1942 he told Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum that this government intercepted a Japanese "winds" message prior to the Pearl Harbor attack.

Drum was then commander of the Army's Eastern defense command. He later became commander of the New York State Guard and was an adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in his 1944 Presidential campaign.

The investigation had brought out previously that Dewey had learned by 1944 that this country was breaking Japanese codes prior to Pearl Harbor. Marshall told the committee he personally asked Dewey not to reveal that fact during the campaign. Dewey complied.

PAULEY'S PALS INSPECT RECORD

a series of talks with Pauley dating back to 1942. One said that Pauley had made "the rawest proposition I ever heard."

That was the one which said Pauley had told Ickes he could raise $300,000 from California oilmen for the Democratic campaign if the government would drop its suit to obtain federal title to oil-rich tidelands.

Pauley has insisted that Ickes misinterpreted his remarks and had garbled some of the facts.

Meanwhile, President Truman made it clear that he would not withdraw Pauley's nomination despite the blistering opposition of Ickes who returns to private life today.

Expects Confirmation

Moreover, the President said he expected the nomination to be confirmed despite indications to the contrary. Then he said that both the late President Roosevelt and Secretary of Navy James Forrestal had favored the nomination.

A few hours later Forrestal issued a statement backing up his chief's claim that Mr. Roosevelt had favored Pauley. But he said his personal choice for the job because of his long Navy experience was his assistant, H. Struve Hensel.

But in view of the fact that he expected two vacancies in the department, Forrestal said he informed Mr. Truman at the Potsdam conference that "I would be agreeable to Mr. Pauley's coming to the Navy department."

The President did not close the matter by saying that he would continue to support Pauley. He added that Ickes was guilty of implied misrepresentation.

When he resigned Ickes said that Mr. Truman had refused to discuss the nomination with him. The President said this was not exactly true.

Mr. Truman said that the last time he had discussed Pauley with Ickes, the interior secretary had said he thought very highly of the oilman. The President did not say when the conversation occurred but it was before Pauley's nomination.

U. S. Steel Corp. Breaks Wage-Price Deadlock; Others To Follow

specializing in alloy steels — will sign Tuesday.

Fabricators Puzzled
Among the smaller companies, principally fabricators, ending of the strike was more problematical. The $5 a ton boost in steel prices was only for basic producers, or about 80 of the companies involved. But the basic mills employ more than half of the nation's steel workers.

The non-integrated and fabricating companies have pleaded that they were caught in the middle of higher materials costs and increased wages. Some have asked for 10 to 15 per cent price increases in addition to the basic increase. However, under President Truman's new wage-price policy they have been promised OPA review of their cases if the wage increase granted follows the "pattern" of the industry.

Union spokesmen said they expected "no major holdouts." It was believed the USW would relax its "pay up or stay struck" dictum where employers offered to "bargain in good faith."

End of the reconversion-choking steel walkout will bring relief to hundreds of steel-consuming companies. With restoration of steel, deliveries, automobile production will climb, railroads will recall more than 10,000 furloughed workers and coal output will increase.

Schultz Testifies That Part Of Jap Note Was Decoded Dec. 6

made any move to warn Pacific outposts that night. Schultz said the President tried to reach Adm. Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, but found he was attending a Washington theater.

Excitement Fanned

He said the President decided against having Stark paged because it might create public excitement. Schultz left the presidential study under the impression that Mr. Roosevelt planned to contact Stark at home later.

Ferguson said he wanted Stark recalled to see whether Schultz testimony refreshes his memory about the night before the attack. Stark and Gen. George C. Marshall, former Army chief of staff, both told the committee they couldn't recall where they were that night. Ferguson said it may be necessary to schedule a special meeting late this month to hear Beardall. The former naval aide is on a special mission to Peru from which he is due to return Feb. 25.

Otherwise, the committee plans to complete the current phase of public hearings next Wednesday.

In order to meet that deadline the committee launched a speedup schedule yesterday during which it heard two other witnesses—Col. Otis K. Sadler of Army Intelligence in Washington and Capt. Joseph J. Rochefort, former naval intelligence officer at Hawaii.

Drum Informed

Sadler revealed that in 1942 he told Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum that this government intercepted a Japanese "winds" message prior to the Pearl Harbor attack.

Drum was then commander of the Army's Eastern defense command. He later became commander of the New York State Guard and was an adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in his 1944 Presidential campaign.

The investigation had brought out previously that Dewey had learned by 1944 that this country was breaking Japanese codes prior to Pearl Harbor. Marshall told the committee he personally asked Dewey not to reveal that fact during the campaign. Dewey complied.

BEETHAM HEADS CONSERVATION

Marietta Educator Named Vice-President Of Ohio Commission

COLUMBUS, Feb. 16—Emory R. Beetham, Cleveland manufacturer, today was elected chairman of the Ohio Conservation and Natural Resources Commission.

The commission, meeting in Columbus, also chose A. E. Rupp, principal of Marietta High School, as vice-chairman. Both selections followed the customary practice of selecting commission officers on a seniority basis.

Beetham is a Republican, while Rupp is a Democratic member of the commission.

The commission also approved a plan for re-organization of the conservation division submitted by H. A. (Buck) Rider, conservation commissioner.

The meeting was presided over by George E. Landis, whose term as commissioner expired Feb. 1, although his successor, Dr. Paul B. Sears of Oberlin College, was present.

'OPERATION MUSK-OX' READIES HISTORIC TREK

KNOWN AS "OPERATION MUSK-OX", a small contingent of the Canadian Army, accompanied by U. S. Army technical experts, prepares to set out from Churchill, Manitoba Province, Canada, on one of the coldest and most hazardous military exercises ever undertaken. Fifty-one men will undertake a 3100 mile trek to "the top of the world"—travelling through 60-below-zero areas from a point 300 miles north of the Arctic circle down to Edmonton, Alberta. At right is shown Lt. Col. Patrick Baird, Montreal, "Commander, Musk-Ox", demonstrating one of the snowmobiles, in which they will travel, to military attaches of several countries, interested in the testing of newest Arctic clothing and navigation problems associated with the magnetic pole. At left is demonstrated how planes will drop drums of gas and rations in chutes as the party moves to thirteen bases in an area where many venturing white men have died. Canadian Army photos. PAULEY'S PALS INSPECT RECORD

a series of talks with Pauley dating back to 1942. One said that Pauley had made "the rawest proposition I ever heard."

That was the one which said Pauley had told Ickes he could raise $300,000 from California oilmen for the Democratic campaign if the government would drop its suit to obtain federal title to oil-rich tidelands.

Pauley has insisted that Ickes misinterpreted his remarks and had garbled some of the facts.

Meanwhile, President Truman made it clear that he would not withdraw Pauley's nomination despite the blistering opposition of Ickes who returns to private life today.

Expects Confirmation

Moreover, the President said he expected the nomination to be confirmed despite indications to the contrary. Then he said that both the late President Roosevelt and Secretary of Navy James Forrestal had favored the nomination.

A few hours later Forrestal issued a statement backing up his chief's claim that Mr. Roosevelt had favored Pauley. But he said his personal choice for the job because of his long Navy experience was his assistant, H. Struve Hensel.

But in view of the fact that he expected two vacancies in the department, Forrestal said he informed Mr. Truman at the Potsdam conference that "I would be agreeable to Mr. Pauley's coming to the Navy department."

The President did not close the matter by saying that he would continue to support Pauley. He added that Ickes was guilty of implied misrepresentation.

When he resigned Ickes said that Mr. Truman had refused to discuss the nomination with him. The President said this was not exactly true.

Mr. Truman said that the last time he had discussed Pauley with Ickes, the interior secretary had said he thought very highly of the oilman. The President did not say when the conversation occurred but it was before Pauley's nomination.

specializing in alloy steels — will sign Tuesday.

Fabricators Puzzled

Among the smaller companies, principally fabricators, ending of the strike was more problematical. The $5 a ton boost in steel prices was only for basic producers, or about 80 of the companies involved. But the basic mills employ more than half of the nation's steel workers.

The non-integrated and fabricating companies have pleaded that they were caught in the middle of higher materials costs and increased wages. Some have asked for 10 to 15 per cent price increases in addition to the basic increase. However, under President Truman's new wage-price policy they have been promised OPA review of their cases if the wage increase granted follows the "pattern" of the industry.

Union spokesmen said they expected "no major holdouts." It was believed the USW would relax its "pay up or stay struck" dictum where employers offered to "bargain in good faith."

End of the reconversion-choking steel walkout will bring relief to hundreds of steel-consuming companies. With restoration of steel, deliveries, automobile production will climb, railroads will recall more than 10,000 furloughed workers and coal output will increase.

FRENCH REBUILD RAILROADS HIT SO HARD IN WAR

Equipment Being Replaced Through Purchases From United States

By Haynes Thompson

PARIS.—Despite the tremendous damage suffered by France's railroads during the war, reconstruction has been proceeding at such a pace that officials in charge of the program are optimistically pointing to 1946 as the year which should see a near-return to prewar normalcy.

Although admitting there still is a tremendous job ahead if reconstruction is to be anywhere near completed by the end of 1946, officials here point with enthusiasm to what already has been accomplished.

They point out that what has been done was accomplished despite the fact France has been suffering from the most acute shortage of coal in its history, to say nothing of a shortage of almost every kind of material widely needed in the reconstruction of a war-devastated railway system.

In September, 1944, the nation's railroads seemed almost beyond hope of repair. There wasn't a single phase of the system which had escaped damage. Locomotives, freight and passenger cars, tracks, stations, freight yards, bridges, repair shops, sidings—all had been seriously damaged by the war.

Out of a total of 17,000 locomotives which France had in 1939, 11,800 remained following the Liberation. But actually only 2,900 of these were usable. Today there are 12,800 engines in France, 8,100 of which are in running order. Damaged locomotives are being repaired at the rate of 100 per month.

To rebuild further their depleted stock of engines the French have placed orders in America and Canada for 1,340 engines, with delivery expected during 1946. Some of the engines, 1,200 of which will come from the U. S. and 140 from Canada already have arrived at Marseilles.

Before the war there were approximately 460,000 freight cars in France. Only 230,000 remained following Liberation. But today the French are repairing their damaged cars at the rate of 2,000 per month.

In addition, delivery is expected this month on 1,500 cars ordered from the United States, while future plans call for the eventual purchase from America of some 38,750 cars if financial arrangements can be worked out.

Rail Yards Repaired
Besides these, 3,000 freight cars have been received from England, and delivery on an additional 7,000 has already started to come through.

But there, as with locomotives, the French aren't relying on imports alone. Orders placed with their own industry call for the production of 11,220 cars as soon as possible and an additional order for 21,000 cars is planned pending the arrival of necessary materials from the United States and Canada. Delivery of these, however, is not expected for at least two years.

About 40 of the big rail yards were destroyed up to 80 per cent these yards are approximately 75 per cent repaired. Some of them are actually handling more cars today than they did in 1943.

ARMY TO TAKE YOUNGER 4-F'S

More Occupation Troops Critically Needed, Draft Boards Are Told

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The nation's draft boards began combing their registration lists today for younger 4-F's to meet the Army's critical need for occupation troops.

The Army, admitting defeat in its efforts to obtain fully fit men, asked selective service to funnel 75,000 physical rejects into uniform by the end of April.

These will be in addition to the 50,000 men a month the Army has requested from the draft system to meet its discharge program and still retain a strength of 1,500,000 men on June 30.

The 4-F's for the most part will be taken from the ranks of non-fathers between the ages of 18 and 25 who previously qualified for limited service but were not taken because of overflowing quotas.

The draftees also will include some with physical disabilities at present deferred for agriculture and occupational reasons.

TO THE CITIZENS OF CIRCLEVILLE

For your further information regarding the Water situation in Circleville, we submit below a copy of a letter sent to Mayor Gordon and to each Councilman on January 22, 1946.

Ohio Water Service Co.
By OLIVER G. FOX, Manager

"January 22, 1946.

Hon. Mayor Gordon and
Members of City Council
Circleville, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

For obvious reasons neither I nor anyone representing the Company has been in verbal or written communication with you or the council for many months except with respect to day to day operating problems of mutual interest and responsibility. I trust this letter may be received in the spirit with which it is composed and delivered.

Surely by now you and your co-workers have seen the many problems that arise with the acquisition of and future operation of the water plant in Circleville. Everyone: citizen, consumer, official, bond house, engineers, lawyers, accountants and just plain well-wishers have their pet ideas of what should be done, when and how, and many if not most of the proposals run at cross purposes.

May I briefly suggest a few of the questions that we understand have been presenting themselves in rather forceful fashion during the last few months?

1. May not the proposed municipal water plant be required to pay State taxes? The Supreme Court has in effect said yes in a recent Cleveland case.
2. May not the proposed municipal water plant be required to pay Federal taxes? The Supreme Court has in effect said yes in a recent Saratoga Springs case.
3. Are there not evidences that our Company has been doing even a better job in Circleville since the separation from a holding Company and its operation as a strictly Ohio entity?
4. May not the protracted illness of our previous plant manager have produced certain situations which developed from small beginnings into more or less major problems?
5. Are there not evidences that our new plant manager has the ability, desire and general know-how to meet the demands of the City administration and the public?
6. Have not the Chamber of Commerce and other public groups determined the property to have a value of about $250,000 and may not the public raise its eyebrows at the $420,000 verdict and the suggestion of issuing an additional $209,000 in bonds for a total of $629,000?
7. May not the sewage disposal plant situation serve to cause further questioning of reliance upon outside expert pressure and advice where the credit of the City is so heavily involved?
8. Is there not evident, since the end of the war, a desire on the part of the people to follow more conservative procedures?
9. Have the rapidly increasing costs of labor and material been fully recognized as important elements in future operations and their effect on rates?

The foregoing are but a few of the questions that we are advised are "going the rounds."

I would like to suggest that our situation over the past year has been expensive to both the City and the Company and appears to be far from settled. Might not a conference between the City and the Company looking toward the dropping of this case and a basis of agreement for future operations by the Company be in order and in the public interest? I would anticipate that such a conference would embrace the handling of condemnation case expenses and costs to date: a discussion of satisfactory rates with particular consideration of a more equitable distribution of water cost between classes of consumers and also the question of public fire protection charges: the providing of certain system improvements such as steamer fire hydrants and an "in-town" standpipe and other items which the recent case indicated were considered of great importance by the City as well as any other matters that a re-examination of the situation might develop.

While our respective lawyers are scrapping along on the expensive litigation, Circleville's steady growth and development continues. Along with it, the needs of the public for water service increase. Last year, in response to urgent demand, we installed certain additions to our plant in Circleville at a cost of approximately four thousand dollars. The expenditures to which I refer were made after the trial in the condemnation case, and the property installed was not included in that which the jury valued. We went ahead on the belief that some fair and mutually satisfactory arrangement could be worked out for reimbursing us if ultimately you took over our plant. We are now faced with demands for still more additions. The people need it within the next few weeks and months. If it is to be supplied, we have to order the materials at once, so it appears to us that in the public interest, you and we should come to an understanding with respect to these matters.

It may be recalled that prior to the institution of the litigation now pending, we had got so far along as that the Council had progressed to a first reading on an ordinance covering rate and other matters.

If you would like to do so, we would be glad to confer with you concerning any or all of the things mentioned in this letter.

Yours very truly,

Ohio Water Service Company
G. Taylor Evans, President."

Equipment Being Replaced Through Purchases From United States

By Haynes Thompson

PARIS.—Despite the tremendous damage suffered by France's railroads during the war, reconstruction has been proceeding at such a pace that officials in charge of the program are optimistically pointing to 1946 as the year which should see a near-return to prewar normalcy.

Although admitting there still is a tremendous job ahead if reconstruction is to be anywhere near completed by the end of 1946, officials here point with enthusiasm to what already has been accomplished.

They point out that what has been done was accomplished despite the fact France has been suffering from the most acute shortage of coal in its history, to say nothing of a shortage of almost every kind of material vitally needed in the reconstruction of a war-devastated railway system.

In September, 1944, the nation's railroads seemed almost beyond hope of repair. There wasn't a single phase of the system which had escaped damage. Locomotives, freight and passenger cars, tracks, stations, freight yards, bridges, repair shops, sidings—all had been seriously damaged by the war.

Out of a total of 17,000 locomotives which France had in 1939, 11,800 remained following the Liberation. But actually only 2,900 of these were usable. Today there are 12,800 engines in France, 8,100 of which are in running order. Damaged locomotives are being repaired at the rate of 100 per month.

To rebuild further their depleted stock of engines the French have placed orders in America and Canada for 1,340 engines, with delivery expected during 1946. Some of the engines, 1,200 of which will come from the U. S. and 140 from Canada already have arrived at Marseille.

Before the war there were approximately 460,000 freight cars in France. Only 230,000 remained following Liberation. But today the French are repairing their damaged cars at the rate of 2,000 per month.

In addition, delivery is expected this month on 1,500 cars ordered from the United States, while future plans call for the eventual purchase from America of some 36,750 cars if financial arrangements can be worked out.

Rail Yards Repaired

Besides these, 3,000 freight cars have been received from England, and delivery on an additional 7,000 has already started to come through.

But there, as with locomotives, the French aren't relying on imports alone. Orders placed with their own industry call for the production of 11,220 cars as soon as possible and an additional order for 21,000 cars is planned pending the arrival of necessary materials from the United States and Canada. Delivery of these, however, is not expected for at least two years.

About 40 of the big rail yards were destroyed up to 80 per cent these yards are approximately these yards are approximately 75 per cent repaired. Some of them are actually handling more cars today than they did in 1943.

ARMY TO TAKE YOUNGER 4-F'S

More Occupation Troops Critically Needed, Draft Boards Are Told

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The nation's draft boards began combing their registration lists today for younger 4-F's to meet the Army's critical need for occupation troops.

The Army, admitting defeat in its efforts to obtain fully fit men, asked selective service to funnel 75,000 physical rejects into uniform by the end of April.

These will be in addition to the 50,000 men a month the Army has requested from the draft system to meet its discharge program and still retain a strength of 1,500,000 men on June 30.

The 4-F's for the most part will be taken from the ranks of non-fathers between the ages of 18 and 25 who previously qualified for limited service but were not taken because of overflowing quotas.

The draftees also will include some with physical disabilities at present deferred for agriculture and occupational reasons.

REV. TROUTMAN TALKS ON RANGE OF LUTHERANISM

Three new members were accepted at a meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood Thursday evening in the parish house. The new members are Clydus Young, Harold E. Anderson and Kenneth Young.

Herbert Hammel gave a talk on Valentine Day and the Rev. George L. Troutman spoke on "The Make-Up of the American Lutheran Church—Locally and At-Large."

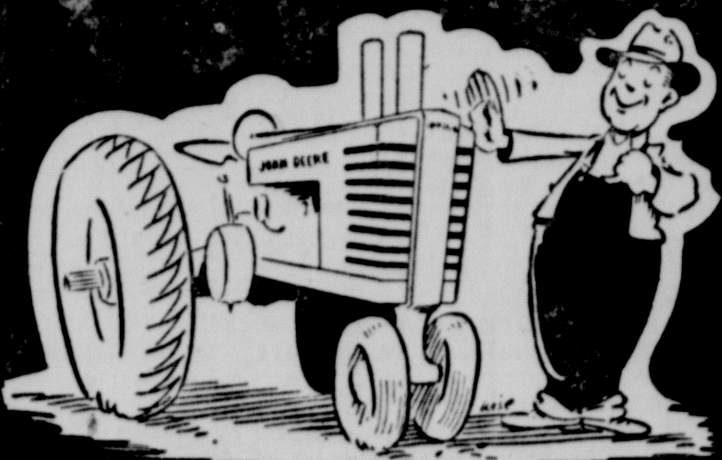

Rev. Troutman explained that there are 1,991 Lutheran congregations in the United States, served by 1,753 pastors. The baptized membership is 607,639 and the confirmed membership, 438,584.

In point of membership in the United States, the Methodists rank first, the Baptists second and the Lutherans third, among protestant denominations. Rev. Troutman said. But in the whole world, there are more Lutherans than all other protestant denominations combined, he added.

George C. Griffith and a committee served refreshments.

TO THE CITIZENS OF CIRCLEVILLE

For your further information regarding the Water situation in Circleville, we submit below a copy of a letter sent to Mayor Gordon and to each Councilman on January 22, 1946.

Ohio Water Service Co.
By OLIVER G. FOX, Manager

"January 22, 1946.

Hon. Mayor Gordon and
Members of City Council
Circleville, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

For obvious reasons neither I nor anyone representing the Company has been in verbal or written communication with you or the council for many months except with respect to day to day operating problems of mutual interest and responsibility. I trust this letter may be received in the spirit with which it is composed and delivered.

Surely by now you and your co-workers have seen the many problems that arise with the acquisition of and future operation of the water plant in Circleville. Everyone: citizen, consumer, official, bond house, engineers, lawyers, accountants and just plain well-wishers have their pet ideas of what should be done, when and how, and many if not most of the proposals run at cross purposes.

May I briefly suggest a few of the questions that we understand have been presenting themselves in rather forceful fashion during the last few months?

1. May not the proposed municipal water plant be required to pay State taxes? The Supreme Court has in effect said yes in a recent Cleveland case.
2. May not the proposed municipal water plant be required to pay Federal taxes? The Supreme Court has in effect said yes in a recent Saratoga Springs case.
3. Are there not evidences that our Company has been doing even a better job in Circleville since the separation from a holding Company and its operation as a strictly Ohio entity?
4. May not the protracted illness of our previous plant manager have produced certain situations which developed from small beginnings into more or less major problems?
5. Are there not evidences that our new plant manager has the ability, desire and general know-how to meet the demands of the City administration and the public?
6. Have not the Chamber of Commerce and other public groups determined the property to have a value of about $250,000 and may not the public raise its eyebrows at the $420,000 verdict and the suggestion of issuing an additional $209,000 in bonds for a total of $629,000?
7. May not the sewage disposal plant situation serve to cause further questioning of reliance upon outside expert pressure and advice where the credit of the City is so heavily involved?
8. Is there not evident, since the end of the war, a desire on the part of the people to follow more conservative procedures?
9. Have the rapidly increasing costs of labor and material been fully recognized as important elements in future operations and their effect on rates?

The foregoing are but a few of the questions that we are advised are "going the rounds."

I would like to suggest that our situation over the past year has been expensive to both the City and the Company and appears to be far from settled. Might not a conference between the City and the Company looking toward the dropping of this case and a basis of agreement for future operations by the Company be in order and in the public interest? I would anticipate that such a conference would embrace the handling of condemnation case expenses and costs to date: a discussion of satisfactory rates with particular consideration of a more equitable distribution of water cost between classes of consumers and also the question of public fire protection charges: the providing of certain system improvements such as steamer fire hydrants and an "in-town" standpipe and other items which the recent case indicated were considered of great importance by the City as well as any other matters that a re-examination of the situation might develop.

While our respective lawyers are scrapping along on the expensive litigation, Circleville's steady growth and development continues. Along with it, the needs of the public for water service increase. Last year, in response to urgent demand, we installed certain additions to our plant in Circleville at a cost of approximately four thousand dollars. The expenditures to which I refer were made after the trial in the condemnation case, and the property installed was not included in that which the jury valued. We went ahead on the belief that some fair and mutually satisfactory arrangement could be worked out for reimbursing us if ultimately you took over our plant. We are now faced with demands for still more additions. The people need it within the next few weeks and months. If it is to be supplied, we have to order the materials at once, so it appears to us that in the public interest, you and we should come to an understanding with respect to these matters.

It may be recalled that prior to the institution of the litigation now pending, we had got so far along as that the Council had progressed to a first reading on an ordinance covering rate and other matters.

If you would like to do so, we would be glad to confer with you concerning any or all of the things mentioned in this letter.

Yours very truly,

Ohio Water Service Company
G. Taylor Evans, President."

UNKNOWN PUERTO RICO

A bill before the senate sponsored by Maryland's Senator Millard Tydings to give Puerto Rico freedom within 20 years brings to a focus the American people's indifference and lack of information on this island 1,000 miles from the Florida coast. Tydings would have a 20-year preparatory period before the islanders are given independence, with the idea that during this time economic adjustments like the tariff could be arranged and the island trained for self-management.

Puerto Rico is 100 miles long and 30 wide, with a 2,000,000 population, expected to become 3,000,000 by 1960. Its relation to this country is that of a territory. One-third of the people are said to be illiterate. The average pay of workers in sugar cane is $1.70 a day, seldom with a full six-day week. Practically all they eat, mainly rice and beans, comes from the United States, except for a small amount of native pineapple, bananas and citrus fruits.

There are three general points of view regarding the island's future: First, the present territorial status should be retained; second, the island should be made a state; third, it should have immediate and absolute freedom. Senator Tydings' bill does not reflect exactly any one of these views.

A new book, Wenzell Brown's "Dynamite on our Doorstep", though biased in the eyes of some students of the island, does give much information. Americans need to become informed on this little piece of earth for which they are responsible and about which they must soon come to some decision.

SMOKES AND GOVERNMENT

Is good government worth a pack of cigarettes a week? This question, asked by a midwestern body which has done much to improve the quality and work of its local officials, points out that membership in it costs $5 a year, or a little more than a cent a day. The most modestly priced pack of cigarettes, if one were made to last a week, would average more than two cents a day.

Are people willing to invest the price of a weekly cigarette pack in bettering the government of their city?

"One of the main reasons why I feel sure the UNO will succeed," says an observer, "is that the foreign ministers are beginning to talk to each other like fellow-congressmen. They dare get mad in public because they know their disagreements will be ironed out and a little yelling won't lead to war."

Believe it or not, there are still some Americans to whom our recent wars and occupations have to be explained.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—I asked six-going-on-seven-year-old Clifford Sales how it felt to be in show business. He just grinned, a remarkable toothful grin that split a freckled map under a thatch of red hair. He was in favor of it.

A few minutes before Clifford had not been in show business. He had been just one of 23 boys ranging from six through eight years lined up on the stage of the Ziegfeld Theater while a lot of important show people looked over them and anxious parents waited in the wings. By various processes of elimination, in which size figured prominently, the list was cut to three, then two and Clifford finally won the nod.

The affair was the outgrowth of the failure of Oscar Hammerstein and Richard Rodgers to find not-too-large seven-year-old of what is popularly regarded as the typical American boy type—preferably plenty of freckles, someone like Huck Finn or Tom Sawyer. They had scanned the boys in the professional children's school, as well as a number of public parochial and private schools without seeing a satisfactory youngster.

Clifford, who has done nothing more than recite a piece in school, will play the role of Jake, kid brother of sharpshooter Annie Oakley in the forthcoming Hammerstein-Rodgers musical comedy production, "Annie Get Your Gun." It is a fairly meaty part for a youngster.

Julius Sales, a post office clerk, brought his son to the audition from their home in Brooklyn.

"Nobody in the family has ever been connected with show business," he said. "Funny thing how we came over here. A neighbor of ours read in the paper that they were looking for a freckle-faced boy of seven and got to wondering if there was anybody she knew who answered the description. Then she thought of Clifford, next door. She told me about it and we came over just to see what would happen."

Clifford is in grade 2b of public school. He was the first of the lineup to volunteer to step forward when asked by director Josh Logan for recitation samples. He got a laugh right away from his rendition of a parody on "Jack and Jill" in which the two went after a pail of beer. Joel Gekow, 8, of the Bronx, and Warren Berlinger of Brooklyn were the others in the running for a time, then Warren was dropped. Both of them were dark-haired and freckleless.

Joel, who said he had been determined to be an actor ever since he could remember, was the most assured of the lot. He would have recited a dozen times, had the judges let him, and, at that, he slipped in a few extras before anyone could stop him. He even knew exactly how to handle interviews.

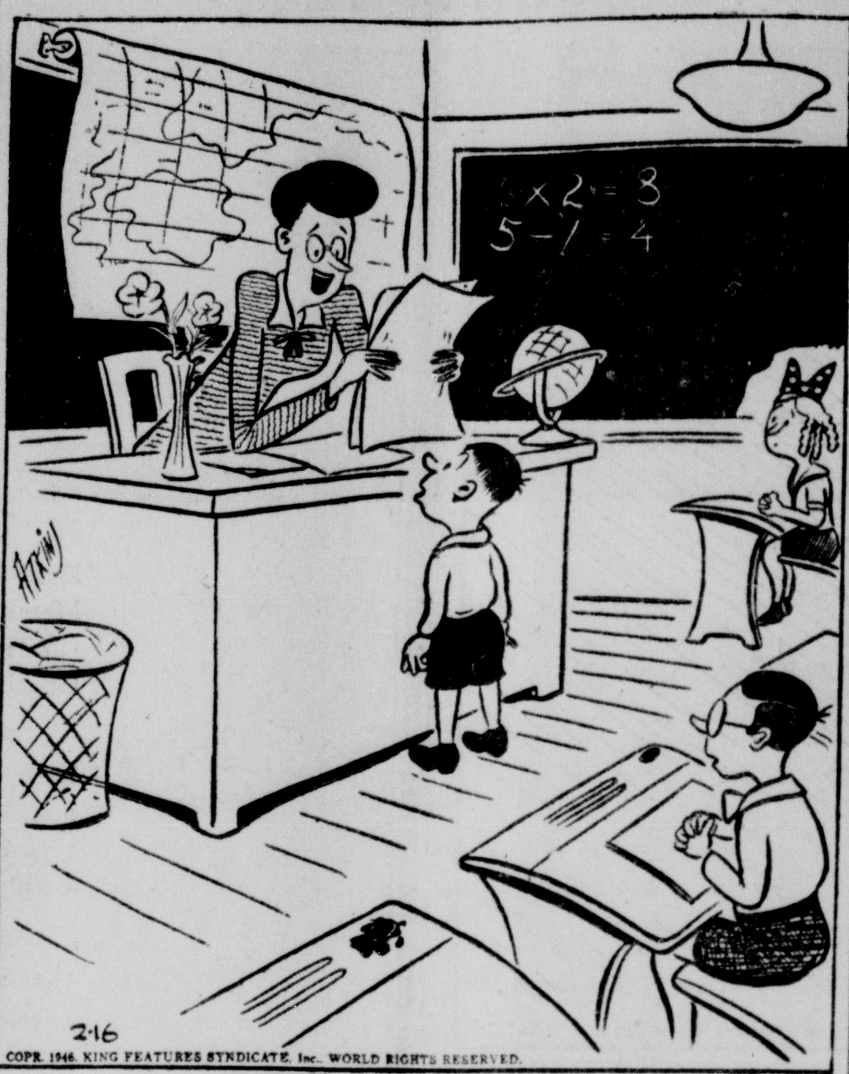

"Where is this going to appear?" he wanted to know "when? I can also be very funny when I want to."

After the matter was all settled and some other auditions were going on Joel suddenly announced he could dance "bogie-woogie" and proceeded to do so.

As far as we're concerned, there are still a lot of things that might profitably be gone with the wind.

There are hundreds of newspapers in this big country, and all different except for their American spirit.

"The Authority on Authorities"

HIGH REVERSE STRONG

WHEN YOUR partner makes a "reverse bid" at a high level—that is, a bid of a higher-ranking suit after your partner has shown a fit in some other suit at a lower level, he is making a very strong call. It is so strong, in fact, that he is taking full responsibility for your going to the next height in that suit, if you fit it, or in the other suit if you do not. Passing him then, unless you doubt his veracity or know you have previously misled him by your own bidding, is rank disloyalty.

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

There was one truly pretty bid in that sequence, South's 2-Hearts, which he could read from the opponents' bidding of spades and diamonds was likely to find a fit with North, and also which was protected anyway by his ability to take cut into a fit with his partner's clubs if he got doubled. But there were also two very bad passes, both of them by West. East's bid of 3-Spades was a "reverse," after the side had found a diamond fit, and therefore indicated not merely at least five cards so that three would make a satisfactory fit, but also great strength. In fact, it showed sufficient strength to compel West to bid 4-Diamonds if lacking a fit with spades. In view of enough strength for four in one suit, East was taking responsibility for four in the other if West had three spades in his hand.

Consequently there was no excuse for West passing the 3-Spades when it reached him. He should have gone to 4-Spades right there. Later, after East doubled the 4-Hearts, West had a double reason to bid the 4-Spades, since his hand was good only at his side's own suits and worthless on the defense.

South made the doubled 4-Hearts, losing two tricks in trumps and one in spades, whereas East could have made 4-Spades, losing only two tricks in trumps and one in hearts.

Your Week-End Question

If your partner makes a business double of a vulnerable opponent's low suit bid and the intervening opponent rescues with another suit, why should you then pass if you are unable to double it?

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

"I," SAID Steve Barton, "am an entirely negative person."

"Meaning," said Mary, "that you always say no?"

She smiled again. Looking up, seeing him there, had been the first interesting thing that had happened to her for a long time. She couldn't analyze it. He was not particularly unusual in appearance. Yet there was something hard and aloof about him which attracted and challenged her imagination.

Jenny had seen that, too. He had changed, she thought unhappily. Naturally he would, after his experiences, and yet she had not expected that he would—toward her. She flushed, remembering how she had whiffed across the room and flung herself at him. His greeting had been amused, but hardly impassioned. She could not understand it. She and Steve . . . pepper and salt, ham and eggs, brandy and soda, anything that went together. She felt as if she were back in her gangling days, pursuing a kindly but bored and impatient young man who looked upon her as an irritating young sister.

He looked at her now across the table. He said, "Jenny, you've grown up."

Mary asked, "Did you expect her to remain 18, or whatever she was? After all, she's being exposed to an intensive course in—maturity." She looked fleetingly at her brother, who was talking to Ede. Justice sat next to Jenny, but he had turned a little away from her.

Jenny's chin went up. She didn't like that remark, nor the tone, nor the thoughtful regard Steve accorded her. Mary said, "Tell us something about your experiences, or would you rather not, Dr. Barton?"

He smiled at her amiably. He said, "I'd much rather not. Suppose you tell me about yours?"

Mr. Hathaway cut in. He said, "Mary, you are forgetting your duties as hostess. Have you dined, doctor—and won't you, if you haven't? How about a drink?"

Steve said, "I've dined, thanks, but I could do with a drink."

Almost everyone—Mr. Hathaway, Mary, the Richardses, and even Howard Morgan—were concentrating on Steve. Jenny felt as flat as last night's champagne. She felt out of it. There was the beginning of a pout in her mind. This was quite different from what she had expected when she had learned that Steve would soon be coming home.

There was something sharper about him, the quick laughter had gone, the warmth she had known and counted on all her days. He was very nearly a stranger, this young man, sitting there, hiding his right hand. He couldn't hide it all the time. He reached for the glass they brought him and she saw the stiff fingers, the drawn flesh, the scar running up the wrist, hidden, eventually, by his cuff.

Mary looked, too. She spoke and Jenny heard her. She asked carelessly, "You aren't going to let that throw you?"

It was the right thing to say, apparently, no sympathy, just a question that was almost a statement. Steve smiled, lopsidedly. He answered, "No, I suppose not."

Jenny drank some black coffee. She heard Justice say to Ede, "The returned hero seems to have made an impression upon my exacting sister," and heard Ede laugh. Then she heard something else. Justice lowered his voice, but there was a little cone of silence around Jenny at the moment. The others talked and laughed together, and Justice and Ede conducted their personal conversation. She was alone, and she could hear.

Ede asked, "Do you never think of Boston, Justice, and the wind across the Common, and how cold it was, and how afterward we—"

He said sharply, "I told you it was one of the things we'd forget. A mistake on both sides. Too dangerous. Too—unrewarding."

It wasn't much. It was enough. They had been in Boston together. They had . . .

Jenny's throat tightened. She thought she must weep or scream. She thought she must rise and leave this room, get away, by herself, try to think this out. But what was there to think? More important, what was there to know?

They might have met by accident, walking on the Common in the sharp wind. They might have—afterward—oh, gone somewhere, for a cup of tea, a cocktail. Harmless enough. They knew each other slightly. When they encountered people you know slightly, suddenly and in another setting, you always believe you know them better than you do. You cry, "Well, for heaven's sake!" You say, "Let's go and have a drink or something."

But Ede had never mentioned it. Ede hadn't been in Boston.

Jenny's hands grew cold. Ede had gone away—in April, wasn't it?—to visit a friend in Worcester, for a week-end. She had come back, full of stories about Edna and her pretty house and her twins.

She could have gone to Edna's, and then to Boston.

Jenny's heart grew as cold as her hands. She remembered the girl on the bus, Agnes Simpson, who said she hadn't seen Ede for a month, at a time when Ede had reported spending an afternoon with her. She remembered the parked car at the empty lot. She remembered Charlotte saying she had seen Justice and Ede in Boston and then correcting herself slightly—it might have been someone who looked like Ede, she amended. She remembered Justice asking about Ede, very casually.

How far had it gone? How much did it mean, to Ede? That it meant anything to Justice, Jenny could not believe. She forced herself to look at him. He was still the same, almost indecently attractive. But all she had felt for him, the half-laughing, half-grave, wholly exciting appeal he had had for her, was gone. That hadn't meant anything, either, she told herself stubbornly, but it had been—oh, fun, an accelerated heartbeat, and something to look forward to when you rose in the morning and set about the business of getting ready to go to work.

Ede, she thought passionately, how could you?

Ede was married. She was married to a man who was overseas fighting, sweating it out in dripping jungles, sleeping with fear, waking to it . . . tortured by heat and insects, facing, by day, by night, an implacable, almost subhuman enemy. Dick Ainslee was a real person. He was a fine man. He was terribly in love with his wife. He merited her love, her fidelity.

There was a sudden commotion over toward the bar door, which created a diversion. Even Steve and Mary looked up from their smiling absorption in one another. Steve, he was having a pretty good time. He was home. And he was with strangers. That was better. Too many friends, commiserating, that was bad, and very hard. Jenny, for instance, her child's face flushed with happiness, her eyes radiant. Just a kid. . . . He'd always been fond of her. But he didn't want people he was fond of, at the moment. Except, of course, his father. And his father's condition lay like a burden upon his mind and heart. It quickened him with anger and rebellion. Not for himself . . . but for the older man. Why did that have to happen to a man like Bert Barton, a whole and useful man?

As for himself, his duty lay clear. It was distasteful, it wasn't what he had planned, nor wanted, but there it was. He owed it to his father. And he had thought, grimly, earlier in the evening, and no back talk to myself about sacrifices. I'm sacrificing nothing. My hands see to that. What else could I do even if Dad were himself?

Mary asked, "What in the world is going on?"

He liked Mary. He had not met her before, although he had seen her briefly on several occasions before he went away. He hadn't seen a woman like her since. . . . You didn't see women like Mary where he'd been. She was all the things—well, some of them—that you thought about, out there. . . . She wasn't the friendly, warm, close things that meant home, the mothering things, the consoling. She was the other side of the picture, entertainment, lightness, and that much overworked word "glamour." A little hard, as he himself had become hard. That was all right, too. Sex and mentality in a pretty package.

Expect little from social arrangements this morning, and take whatever you hear with a grain of salt. Nine nineteen a. m. is a grand time for solving money problems, and around 11 you should plan a good time and have it! Avoid over-eating and emotional excess at lunch time, but at 2 p. m. let people know you're alive and continue your bid for popularity this evening.

Hints on Etiquette
There are no special rules of etiquette to cover one's treatment of in-laws. Even if you don't care much for them, you can show them little courtesies and kindnesses. Remember your life partner probably loves them, and your all around relationships will be pleasanter if you try to be good friends with them.

Horoscope for Sunday
If this is your birthday you are fortunate to have been born in this month. You have exceptional opportunities in love, business or at a career, and can rise to the top. You are most considerate to those dear to you. You love with vigor and your home life should be ideal. Don't be wasteful today. Spare all you can. Consider a change carefully before acting this morning. Now is the time to obey that impulse. Think twice before you speak around 11:54 a. m. and this afternoon attend to insurance premiums.

The Czars regarded their country as a sort of combination oyster and football.

But Russian royalty finally went too far—and then had to face the Moujik.

Today the Czars left are in sports with a supreme sovereignty subject only, of course, to the will of the club owners.

On-Job Training Grows
LINCOLN, Neb.—On-the-job training for World War II veterans is becoming a major vocational educational system in Nebraska, according to State Superintendent Wayne O. Reed.

Acoustics, Lighting
Will Be Modernized

Special to Central Press
WASHINGTON—If Francis P. Sullivan, consulting architect to David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, has his way Congress will have, when proposed modernization of the Capitol is completed, "as nearly ideal legislative chambers, from a practical standpoint, as science today can give." His plans provide for a radical change in the acoustics and lighting of both houses.

In order to correct the acoustical difficulty, Sullivan plans to do away with the cast-iron skylights and glass familiar to thousands of tourists. They will be replaced by a molded ceiling covered with acoustical material of absorbent quality. A similar material will be placed on the walls, thus reducing noise from the galleries.

As for the present lighting, Sullivan termed it a "make-shift" arrangement. Most members, who strain their eyes to see what is going on every time a cloud passes over the skylight, would be inclined to agree with the architect.

Plans are to light the chambers from indirect sources by reflecting light downward on the floor from the ceiling.

Present decorations in the House and Senate will largely be eliminated under the plans now being drawn up.

The two large portraits of Washington and Lafayette in the House will probably be incorporated into the new decorations. The symbols, emblems or seals of the various states may be reproduced in the new design, with vacant space left for other states, such as Hawaii, which may join the Union.

The Senate ceiling may be embellished with designs symbolizing American industry and arts. Appropriate sculpture and mural paintings will also be introduced into the decoration of the two rooms. Historic events may be commemorated by means of panels in both houses. A suggestion under consideration for the Senate is for panels representing the signing of historic treaties.

The work will involve no noticeable change in the exterior of the Capitol, although the slope of the roof will be slightly changed. There is talk, however, of advancing the front of the Capitol at some future date to bring it more in line with the House and Senate wings, which were constructed at a later date.

Lynn predicts that construction would be ready to begin by July 1 and the work is expected to take two or three months. It will represent the first change of any consequence in the two historic chambers since the House was occupied in 1857 and the Senate in 1859.

FARMERS MAY FAIL to meet the nation's 1946 meat production goal because of the feed shortage. The recent meat strike aggravated the situation. Cattle raisers had to hold livestock away from the market, thus consuming extra amounts of scarce feed supplies.

It is believed the agriculture department soon will move to make more feed available to livestock men, less to poultry raisers.

"The old era is not yet dead. It is engaged in a life and death struggle with the new. Evils there are in plenty, gigantic and formidable, but they are being exposed, investigated, challenged and attacked with new vigor and hope. In addition to doing his "Orson Welles' Almanac" broadcasts Sundays, Welles is turning mechanic -- but of a very special kind. He has been huddling with Richard Himber, the maestro, who is one of the best investors of magicians' tricks in the country -- and the boys are up to tricks.

Conductor Frank DeVol, back in Hollywood after four weeks in New York with the Ginny Simms program, cut a series of records with Singer Margaret Whiting while in Gotham.

When Charles (Andy) Correll selected a part septagenarian and kissed her as part of the audience warmup at the Tuesday "Amos 'n' Andy" show, he found that years had not dulled her wit. He asked her name and she replied: "I'm Annabella Grant from Imperial, Nebraska, and they say we are related to Ulysses S. Grant -- but I don't smoke as many cigars!"

Ann Sothern, radio's "Maise," came to rehearsal this week and announced that she'd just thought of a crackerjack new campaign for "Maise's" newspaper to sponsor in the mythical community of "Mid-dietown." Said Miss Sothern: "She could advocate four curbs for every street -- so motorists can have more room to park!"

SOCORRO, N. M. -- New Mexico cattle shipments in 1945 exceeded those of 1944 by $4,865 head, according to Sam McCue, secretary of the state cattle sanitary board. Shipments in 1945 totaled $29,090 head, compared with 744,204 in 1944.

As early as 50 B. C., the Chinese had originated a method of printing in ink on paper by means of engraved blocks. It was not until nearly 1,000 years later that printing in this manner was extensively practiced.

MASSEY AS MECHANIC

Playing the real-life role of an obscure mechanic going blind, who discovers a new career for himself, Raymond Massey will keynote "Harvest of Stars" Sunday. Vivian Della Chiesa will be the guest star. Two songs by Miss Della Chiesa will exemplify courage in adversity by famed composers -- "Serenade" by Franz Schubert, who went through life penniless, and "I Love You Truly" by Carrie Jacobs Bond, who was forced to publish her own compositions.

GIRLS SING SPIRITUALS

"Hour of Charm" music follows a traditional American pattern of spirituals and nostalgic melodies as Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra prematurely celebrate George Washington's birthday on their broadcast Sunday evening. Evelyn and Her Magic Violin play the old favorite "Home Sweet Home," Jeannie sings "Listen to the Mocking Bird," and Francine and the choir do a group of four spirituals.

KOKOMO CAGE SHOW

For a Vox Pop broadcast about the world's most popular sport, basketball, Parks Johnson and Warren Hull will stop off at Kokomo, Ind., the U. S. hotbed of the hoop game, "where every kid is born with a basketball in his hands." Interviews with players of all ages from Kokomo's 118 teams will be broadcast Monday.

"CAPTAIN JANUARY"

Margaret O'Brien will play the whimsical little girl, "Star," in "Captain January" when it is presented on Radio Theatre Monday. "Star" is rescued from the briny deep by a lovable old sea Captain who undertakes to raise her as his own. Their life in a little New England fishing town is a happy one until the first ill wind blows in the form of a local school mistress. The latter tries to prove Star's environment is not the best for a little girl.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Rising to the challenge of Meredith Willson's recent statement that it would take a musical genius to utilize the name "Connecticut" in a state song, Ralph Blain and Hugh Martin, composers of the famous "Trolley Song," have completed a tune about Connecticut which is now in the hands of publishers.

Curt Massey, baritone featured on the Andrews Sisters "N-K Musical Showroom" Wednesday nights, is turning out new songs with the regularity of a metronome. Massey has just sold two of his tunes, "Living For Love" and "I'll Still Be Around," to the Emcee Music Company. One of Curt's previous compositions, "The

Probate Court Reports Major Upswing In Business During 1945

FIGURES RECORD ALL-TIME PEAK BOOM IN LOVE

150 Wedding Licenses Issued; 139 Estates Handled During Year

The probate court handled 150 marriage licenses, 139 estates, 10 state hospital commissions and 62 will probations during 1945.

This represents an increase of 10 per cent over any previous year. Judge Sterling Lamb explained.

Marriage licenses jumped from 100 in 1944 to 150 in 1945.

The number of estates climbed from 111 in 1944 to 139 in 1945.

Matters handled during 1945 included probations of 62 wills, issuance of 54 letters testamentary, release of 10 estates from administration and issuance of 82 letters of administration.

Last year, 10 persons were committed to state hospitals, 6 to hospitals for the mentally ill, 2 to epileptic institutions and 2 to feeble-minded homes. Five persons were committed to the Pickaway County Infirmary.

Six juveniles, the same number as in 1944, were sent to correction institutions during 1945. The six included one girl, 15, to Girls Industrial School; one boy, 14, and one, 16, to the Boys Industrial School; two boys, one 13, and one 17, to the Bureau of Juvenile Research, and one 17-year-old boy to the Mansfield Reformatory.

Adoption papers were issued to 8 individuals affecting 19 children and guardianships 11 for adult incompetent persons were established. Two new trusteeships were approved.

It was pointed out that several more than the two feeble minded persons could have been committed if there had been places in the state institutions for them. Six such cases are on the probate court list now.

OHIO FIRM PAYS VETERAN $8000 TO GIVE UP JOB

MIDDLEFIELD, O., Feb. 16—Officials of the Johnson Sperry Co. announced today they had paid a World War II veteran $8,000 not to return to his former job with the company.

The cash payment was made to William T. Maguire, a former lieutenant commander in the Navy, who before joining the service was eastern regional sales manager for the Middlefield company.

After his discharge, Maguire applied for his old job, but the company told him it couldn't afford to get rid of the man who had replaced him during the war.

Maguire accepted a sum equal to the largest amount he earned in any year from the time he was first employed until he joined the Navy—$8,000.

The settlement, said Maguire, was satisfactory, but "the length of time necessary to obtain a settlement was unreasonable—from Sept. 26 until last week."

SURPLUS JEEPS DRIVEN INTO BAY, OFFICER AVERS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16—Merchant Capt. F. K. Williams, a former lieutenant commander in the Navy, charged today that hundreds of Navy jeeps in good condition had been driven into the bay at Guadalcanal.

"I saw hundreds of Navy jeeps driven into the bay," the skipper of the Liberty Ship Morgan Robertson said after docking here. "I saw two enormous cranes, scores of small cranes and 50 or more trucks dunked into thousands of fathoms of water."

Williams said 10 new fire trucks were destroyed on the ground at Guadalcanal, 3,600,000 feet of lumber and countless wooden buildings burned and a warehouse 150 feet long emptied of thousands of good tires which took six bulldozers three days to bury.

"The Navy scuttled a landing craft tank loaded with pumps, engines, concrete mixers, pipe wrenches," Capt. Williams said. "In fact I raided their big two-door ice box and salvaged 47 pounds of butter, several slabs of bacon and numerous hams before they sank the ship. Canned goods galore, including asparagus tips and pineapples, were destroyed with the ship."

2 SCHOOL BOYS CONFESS THEFT OF FIFTY AUTOS

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—Two Brooklyn school boys confessed today they had stolen 50 automobiles in the last two months—one almost every night—to take their girl friends riding.

Police arrested Raymond Whitney, 16, and Thomas Neale, 14, after firing two shots at a stolen car and causing it to crash into a fence. The boys had always abandoned the stolen cars after the joyrides.

They sank the ship. Canned goods galore, including asparagus tips and pineapples, were destroyed with the ship.

ELECTION DELAYED
Election of officers for the Chamber of Commerce, originally scheduled for Friday has been delayed until Monday for further consideration, Mack Parrett, secretary, announced.

The introductory training of the committeemen was conducted by Gil Bolin, field executive, aided by Scoutmasters Oliver Fox and Richard Morris.

The troop committee will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. in the church to draw up a troop charter.

The cash payment was made to William T. Maguire, a former lieutenant commander in the Navy, who before joining the service was eastern regional sales manager for the Middlefield company.

After his discharge, Maguire applied for his old job, but the company told him it couldn't afford to get rid of the man who had replaced him during the war.

Maguire accepted a sum equal to the largest amount he earned in any year from the time he was first employed until he joined the Navy—$8,000.

The settlement, said Maguire, was satisfactory, but "the length of time necessary to obtain a settlement was unreasonable—from Sept. 26 until last week."

SURPLUS JEEPS DRIVEN INTO BAY, OFFICER AVERS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16—Merchant Capt. F. K. Williams, a former lieutenant commander in the Navy, charged today that hundreds of Navy jeeps in good condition had been driven into the bay at Guadalcanal.

"I saw hundreds of Navy jeeps driven into the bay," the skipper of the Liberty Ship Morgan Robertson said after docking here. "I saw two enormous cranes, scores of small cranes and 50 or more trucks dunked into thousands of fathoms of water."

Williams said 10 new fire trucks were destroyed on the ground at Guadalcanal, 3,600,000 feet of lumber and countless wooden buildings burned and a warehouse 150 feet long emptied of thousands of good tires which took six bulldozers three days to bury.

"The Navy scuttled a landing craft tank loaded with pumps, engines, concrete mixers, pipe wrenches," Capt. Williams said. "In fact I raided their big two-door ice box and salvaged 47 pounds of butter, several slabs of bacon and numerous hams before they sank the ship. Canned goods galore, including asparagus tips and pineapples, were destroyed with the ship."

2 SCHOOL BOYS CONFESS THEFT OF FIFTY AUTOS

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—Two Brooklyn school boys confessed today they had stolen 50 automobiles in the last two months—one almost every night—to take their girl friends riding.

Police arrested Raymond Whitney, 16, and Thomas Neale, 14, after firing two shots at a stolen car and causing it to crash into a fence. The boys had always abandoned the stolen cars after the joyrides.

The longest of these trips was a two-week jaunt to England. He also was flown to Cuba, Brazil, Canada and Newfoundland. He was at none of these places long enough to be credited for overseas service.
